Enters a knight with two or three Gentlemen.

Knig. Endangered so his wife? murdered his children?

4. Gen. So the Cry comes.

Kni, I am sorry I ere knew him,
That euer he took life and naturall being
From such an honoured stock, and fair discent;
Til this black minut without staine or blemish:

4 Gent. Here come the men,

Enter the master of the colledge and the rest, with the prisoner.

Kni. The serpent of his house? Ime sorry for this time that I am in place of iustice.

Mr. Please you Sir.

Kni. Doe not repeate it twice I know too muche, would it had nere byn thought on;
Sir I bleede for you.

4 Gent. Your fathers sorrows are aliue in me:
What made you shew such monstrous crueltie;

Hu. In a worde Sir,
I hane consumd all, plaid awaie long acre,
And I thought it the charitablest deed I could doe
To cussen beggery: and knock my house oth head.

Kni. Oh in a cooler bloud you will repent it.

Huſ. I repent now, that ones left vnkild,
My brat at nurse. Oh I would ful fain haue weand him

Knigh. Well, I doe not think but in to morrowes iudgement.
The terror will sit closer to your soule,

When